Synergy Services is Going Green

Denver, CO, June 16, 2008 – Synergy Services Corporation, a leading provider of contingent workforce solutions, is introducing a number of initiatives to reduce the amount of paper used throughout the business. Within the past six months Synergy has introduced a fully automated enrollment process including digital signatures for new contractors. This has significantly improved the time it takes to onboard contractors easily with greater accuracy. Under a separate initiative, Synergy has also begun to eliminate sending out paper check stubs to contractors and allow contractors to view this information online including pay details, payment history and year end W-2 information via a secure web portal, Synergy Online.

“We wanted to do our part to contribute to the environment on behalf of our contractors and customers”, stated Tim Miller, CEO of Synergy Services Corporation. “Fortunately, our contractors have really engaged in the process by utilizing the tools we have developed.”

In addition, Synergy has plans to move to a new building in the same area to accommodate its continued growth. As a further sign of its commitment to environmental concerns, Synergy has chosen a Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) certified building under construction to call its new headquarters location. The move to the new location should be completed by the end of the year.

“We are also excited about our move to the new facility in order to support our continued growth,” said Miller. “The fact that we are going to occupy a part of the greenest building in the Cherry Creek North district simply reinforces our company’s core values beyond the boardroom.”

In the United States, buildings use one-third of our total energy, two-thirds of our electricity and one-eighth of our water supply. The LEED Green Building Rating System for New Construction has been helping professionals across the country to improve the quality of buildings and their impact on the environment.
